Course Description

How should we live? What is a good life? Ought I to forgo my own interests for the interests of another? Is it sometimes permissible to kill innocent human beings? Is it permissible to kill animals for food? Ethical philosophy attempts to answer these sorts of questions through reason and reflection. Within current ethical philosophy, there are three major schools of thought on how these sorts of questions should be answered, utilitarianism, virtue theory, and deontology. While each of these attempts to shed light on all of these questions merely through reason and reflection, each of them arrives at very different answers to these questions. In this class, we will investigate utilitarianism, deontology, and virtue theory in some detail by closely reading both the founding texts of each of the ethical theories as well as reading some modern re-interpretations and criticisms. In addition, in the last part of the class, we will seek to apply these theories to two test cases: abortion and animal rights. The application to test cases should both shed light on our intuitions about these morally contested issues but also shed light on the ethical theories themselves.

Language, Philosophy, and Culture:

This course satisfies the Texas Tech University core curriculum requirement in Language, Philosophy, and Culture. As such this course shares the goals of the Language, Philosophy and Culture requirement: “courses in this core component area focus on how ideas, values, beliefs, and other aspects of culture reflect and affect human experience. Courses involve the exploration of ideas that foster aesthetic and intellectual creation in order to understand the human condition across cultures.” (TTU Course Catalog)

General Competency Statement:

“Students graduating from Texas Tech University should be able to think critically and evaluate possible multiple interpretations, cultural and historical contexts, and values.” (TTU Course Catalog)

General Learning Objectives for Language, Philosophy, and Culture Core Courses:

- Critical Thinking Skills.

A Note on the Course Readings:

Reading philosophy is more difficult than most other kinds of reading. Glancing through the syllabus, you will notice there are almost always fewer than 35 pages of reading per week. Most weeks average about 25 pages per week. This is considerably less reading than your average humanities class. Nevertheless, you will find that to do this reading properly, it will take you at least as long as it does to complete reading 3 times as long. This is because reading philosophy is quite hard. Although I do not expect each student to have understood every sentence of the reading, I do expect students to have made a serious attempt to understand the reading before coming to class. So what counts as a serious attempt? A serious attempt varies for each person and each text, but it rarely involves one casual read. Often it will involve at least two reads, once for general gist and overall claims, and a more careful read in which attention is paid to how the author justifies the claims and whether you the reader find these justifications plausible. There may be some philosophers who can read and understand philosophy without taking notes, but most of us require careful underlining and notes.

To aid you with your readings, weekly reading questions will be emailed to you. These questions are not designed to test whether you have “done” the reading in the sense of passed your eyes over each word. Rather, the questions are meant to assist you in your attempt to think philosophically about the reading. Answering these questions is very demanding, and you should expect to spend all week completing them. Each Monday, I will collect a few of these questions for grading. You can find out which questions will be collected because they will be in bold on the homework. After listening to class discussions, you may rewrite these questions and resubmit them on Friday. If you chose to submit a rewrite, the rewrite alone will determine your grade. You may only submit a rewrite if you submit an original homework on Monday.

Requirements:

- 3 Midterms composed of several short answer questions. Many of these questions will be pulled directly from the reading guides.
- 1 Final Exam which will also be short answer.
- 14 Homework Assignments: At the beginning of each week (more or less), a homework will be collected. The homework will consist of selected problems from a reading guide. Although only the selected problems will be turned in and graded, I strongly recommend answering each of the problems from the reading guide. All the reading guides are available in advance. Each student is allowed to drop her 4 lowest homework grades. In addition, it is possible to turn in re-writes of the homework on Thursday of the week that they are due. These re-writes will count in lieu of the original homework provided you have received a sufficient grade on the original homework demonstrating that you have made a serious effort.

Students With Disabilities

Any student who, because of a disabling condition, may require some special arrangements in order to meet course requirements should contact me as soon as possible so that the necessary accommodations can be made. Students should present appropriate verification from AccessTECH in the Student Counseling Center in West Hall. To preserve confidentiality, you may ask to speak to me in private, or notify me by email.

Academic Integrity

I refer all infractions to Student Judicial Programs without exception. Please familiarize yourself with TTU's statement on academic integrity and come speak with me if you have any questions:

<http://www.depts.ttu.edu/studentjudicialprograms/academicinteg.php#>

Plagiarism is the most common integrity violation that I encounter, and in many of these cases, the student claims that she was unaware that what she was doing counted as plagiarism. Plagiarism occurs when a student presents someone else's work as her own, whether this work comes from a friend, a printed source, or the internet. This means that plagiarism can never occur if something is properly cited because then it is not presented as your own. Changing a few words does not preclude plagiarism. If you have any questions about plagiarism please see me.

Attendance Policy:

Class attendance is required. Please come to class on time and prepared. Each student is allowed 4 absences for the entire semester. I will assume that your reason for missing class is a serious one so there is no need to email me to explain. However, any absence after the 4th will lead to a penalty of 1/3 of a letter grade to your overall class grade for each day missed. For example, if you miss 5 days but have aced the entire class, your grade will drop from an A to an A-, if you miss 6 days it will drop to a B+, etc. If you have an excused absence please bring supporting documentations.

Tardiness: Attendance will be taken when I arrive in class. If you arrive after I call your name, you will be marked late. Being late three times amounts to an absence.

Lecture Dos and Don'ts

Do the reading before class.

Do bring your book to lecture.

Do buy your book ASAP.

Do listen to each other and not just me.

Don't text or use cell phones in class. (Cell phones should not even be in visible. If I see a cell phone I will ask you to leave the class.)

Don't use your laptops or Ipads to take notes unless you are sitting in the front row.
